

Appalachia

Volume 68
Number 2 Summer/Fall 2017: Stories from the Albums

Article 19

2017

A Peak Ahead: Mount Washington

Christine Woodside

Follow this and additional works at: <https://digitalcommons.dartmouth.edu/appalachia>

Part of the Nonfiction Commons

Recommended Citation

Woodside, Christine (2017) "A Peak Ahead: Mount Washington," Appalachia: Vol. 68 : No. 2 , Article 19.
Available at: <https://digitalcommons.dartmouth.edu/appalachia/vol68/iss2/19>

This In Every Issue is brought to you for free and open access by Dartmouth Digital Commons. It has been accepted for inclusion in Appalachia by an authorized editor of Dartmouth Digital Commons. For more information, please contact dartmouthdigitalcommons@groups.dartmouth.edu.

Mount Washington

OUR WINTER/SPRING ISSUE WILL TAKE US UP MOUNT WASHINGTON, the highest mountain in the Northeast. Its high winds, rime ice, and frequent clouds swirl around the infrastructure at 6,288 feet: the Mount Washington Observatory, the terminus of the Cog Railway tracks, top of the Auto Road, parking lot, state visitors' center, and crowds of eager hikers and travelers.

We've read in many places that the mountain is in charge. That's certainly true on Washington.

Fifty years after an accident on the Cog Railway, David Govatski, who helped in the rescue, talks to survivors and assembles the events leading to the derailment. Dan Szczesny writes about his adventurous year following the characters of Mount Washington, especially his week spent living at the "Obs" with the weather observers.

Rime ice covers the summit sign on Mount Washington. JERRY AND MARCY MONKMAN/
ECOPHOTOGRAPHY

Ty Gagne, a risk management expert who had us on the edge of our seats at last year's Appalachian Mountain Club summit, writes about why group dynamics can lead to danger in the mountains in an intriguing essay, "Weakness in Numbers."

Elissa Ely again catches conversational nuance as she trudges up a mountain, this time in Alberta. Marty Carlock writes why he climbs Mount Monadnock so often. Mike Cherim shares a fictional tale that could be true for anyone, "How I Died Hiking."

In other stories, Bill Geller reveals the mystery woman who climbed Katahdin in 1859, and trail workers reunite over something one of them published in a magazine. Join us for all this and our regular features of Accidents, Alpina, book reviews, and news.

—Christine Woodside

"I started reading Appalachia for the accident reports, but I kept reading for the great features."—Mohamed Ellozy, subscriber

SUPPORT THE STORIES YOU LOVE!

Start or renew your Appalachia subscription today, and keep reading America's longest-running journal of mountaineering and conservation.

Visit outdoors.org/appalachia for a special offer: 36% off the journal's cover price. That's three years of Appalachia (6 issues) for only $42. Or choose a one-year subscription (2 issues) for $18—18% off the cover price.

Inside every issue, you'll find:

- inspired writing on mountain exploration, adventurers, ecology, and conservation
- up-to-date news and notes on international expeditions
- analysis of recent Northeastern mountaineering accidents
- book reviews, poetry, and much more

Subscribe today at outdoors.org/appalachia or call 800-372-1758.

Subscription prices valid as of September 2021. Prices and offers subject to change without notice. For the most up-to-date info, visit outdoors.org.